

Washington Northeast Supervisory Union Local Standards Board

Vermont's relicensing process requires the development of an educational portfolio that documents the educator's professional growth through self-assessment, professional development and reflection.

Washington Northeast Supervisory Union has a local standards board that educators can work with to develop their portfolios and acquire credits for workshops, courses, teaching of courses/workshops and other applicable educational experience. The Plan of Operations, policies, forms and link to the Agency of Education, licensing website are located on the WNESU website on the LSB page. You can also contact a LSB committee member for forms and information.

The WNESU LSB meets every month alternating between both schools. Educators should turn in their Professional Development Activity Approval form each year as they take their applicable professional development. Each educator has a contact person to go to and ask for help. The list of information is posted in the staff room every year.
